Use of Facsimile Reproductions

Permission to publish facsimile reproductions of materials in the collections of the Yale University Library will ordinarily be granted only upon written application and advance payment of the permission fee, which is separate from charges for supplying photographs. Each facsimile reproduction must bear an appropriate credit line, the exact form of which will be provided when the request is approved.

In granting permission to publish facsimile reproductions of items in its collections, the Yale University Library does not surrender its own right to publish the items or its right to grant the same permission to others. Authorization by Yale University is not a copyright agreement and does not remove the author's or publisher's responsibility to guard against infringement of rights held by others. Permission to publish is for one-time, nonexclusive, world-wide rights in a single edition in a single format.

Fees

$50.00 for facsimile reproduction used in books.

$500.00 per facsimile reproduction used for commercial or promotional images; for products such as calendars, games, greeting cards, household objects, and clothing; and for publication in general magazines and newspapers.

Academic Publishing

The fee is usually waived for use of facsimile reproductions in scholarly journals. For reproductions in academic and scholarly books, the reduced fee is $25.00 per item, to a maximum of $500, where the material reproduced is incidental or supports the author's text. If the Library's materials constitute the principal interest of the publication, fees must be negotiated.

The Library accepts only written requests
