Eyes in Connecticut: Developing 21st Century Visual Literacy to Focus on Special Collections

Workshop Two

March 3, 2006
9:00am–4:30pm

Sponsored by a grant from the Teagle Foundation
Image collections, in whatever format, constitute unique special collections that can be individually tailored to each teacher's pedagogical intent. Connecticut librarians and teachers will join Yale faculty and staff from different disciplines to explore teaching with specialized image collections and ways to assess enhanced undergraduate research skills. Presentations will share teaching experiences and demonstrate:

- how to impact student learning by using visual resources,
- how to incorporate images to address pedagogical objectives,
- how to help students develop critical thinking skills by using images in a variety of disciplines, and
- how to discover and access visual special collections for teaching.
